(ii) enhancement of loan to agriculture sector by the banks from 18 per cent to 20 per cent;

(iii) keeping the rate of interest on crop loans upto a maximum of 5 per cent; and

(iv) Modification of Comprehensive Crop Insurance Scheme to include non-loanee farmers alongwith farmers who have taken bank loans.

The suggestions have been examined.

(i) Enhancement of fertilizer subsidy: Allocation of funds for subsidy on fertilizers is made on the basis of likely production/imports of controlled fertilizers, retention price of individual units, notified sale etc. So long as there is one set of controlled price of urea for the farmers, the farmers would not benefit from any enhanced allocation for fertilizer subsidy.

(ii) Loan to farmers: Out of 40 per cent of advances to priority sector, 18 per cent of the total advance for agriculture appears quite adequate.

(iii) Interest on crop loans: It is not possible to limit the rate of interest on crop loans upto 5 per cent as this would be very uneconomical for the viability of the banks. The present rates being charged by the Institutional Agencies are, however, less than the rates prevailing in the informal sector for crop loans.

(iv) Modification of Comprehensive Crop Insurance Scheme: A proposal is under consideration to revise the Comprehensive Crop Insurance Scheme (CCIS) in which the question of extending the scheme to non-loanee farmers will be examined alongwith other issues.
